No vacuum cleaners, toaster ovens (household appliances), tools, compressors, lawn equipment, wood speakers, wood electric organs, bio-hazards, compressors, smoke alarms, electric toys, electric lamps, magnetic tape.

The bad news about E-Waste is that it may contain hazardous materials like mercury, cadmium, lead, flame retardants and other toxins – things you absolutely don't want to go into landfills or coulees or near our water supply. There is good stuff in E-Waste as well – gold, silver, copper and reusable parts and wire. All of these items can be used again and again.

In 2012 14,866 pounds of electronic waste were collected and recycled. In 2013 22,449 pounds were recycled, in 2014 20,951 pounds was recycled and in 2015 a record 26,750 pounds was collected at the annual event.
